MRS. ELIZABETH CULLING, Widow of WILLIAM CULLING Esq, who died in London on 30th day of June, 1790 bequeathed upon trust to the / minister and Churchwardens of this Parish / three per cent reduced bank annuities for the purposes and effects following / that is to say / that they the said minister and churchwardens shall apply the / interest of one hundred and fifty pounds a part of the said annuities the / same shall become due in painting, repairing, and keeping clean the vault in this / churchyard in which the said William Culling Esq. and Elizabeth his late widow / are buried - that is - the iron rails, round the said vault, are to be painted twice / over in oil every two years at Michaelmas, for which the painter, who if there is one / resident, is to be of this parish, shall be paid for every such painting the sum of two / guineas. The inscription on the stonework of the said vault, is to be kept legible and for keeping the said stonework constantly clean from weeds and dirt, the sexton / of this parish is to be paid the annual sum of ten shillings and six pence.

And these intentions being properly provided for and complied with, then such / surplus as may remain, from the interests of the said sum of one hundred and fifty / pounds is to be applied to the relief of proper objects of this parish, in cloathing / and bread which bread, as the vault is a faculty vault, it is requested may be termed faculty bread.

It is also directed by the last will and testament of the said Mrs. Elizabeth Culling / that the fifty pounds residue of the above two hundred pounds, shall be permitted / to accumulate for the extraordinary and accidental repairs of the said vault. As in / process of time the top of the vault may fall in, it is particularly specified that none / of the earth shall be removed, nor any of the Pavement taken up; but that the surface / of the vault shall be made even by putting on chalk or other materials proper for / that purpose, and paved anew with stones fastened by good iron cramps and protected by new iron railings. And these intentions being fully answered and complied with / the minister and churchwardens shall from time to time when the said fifty pounds and / the accumulations of interest thereon, amount to one hundred pounds stock, sell out / twenty pounds of the said stock, which shall be applied in the putting of poor / children apprentices, or in such other charitable uses as shall to them seem most proper.

And in recompense of the trouble which may arise in carrying these intentions / into effect, the said Mrs. Elizabeth Culling bequeathed to the minister of this parish / for the time being the interest of one hundred pounds stock for ever and to the churchwardens / for the time being the like sum. Provided always, that they the said minister and church / wardens, shall fulfill the wishes and requests of the said Mrs. Elizabeth Culling, respecting her / said vault; and if they shall at any time fail herein, then the said interest shall not be / payable to nor received by, such minister or churchwardens, but by such of their / successors as shall faithfully apply the interest of the said sum of two hundred pounds / beforementioned, according to the true intent of her will.

This Stone is erected this twenty ninth day of September, 1790, by the executors of / the above named testatrix, according to the express tenor and directions of her will / and is to be retained legible from the interest and accumulation of the above / mentioned fifty pounds for every.

the Reverend John Jefferson execr.
David Mac Culloch, Esq.

(Note: the sum of £200.)

Near this place are deposited / in the hope of a blessed resurrection to eternal life / the remains of the REV. JONATHAN BOUCHER M.A. / 19 years Vicar of this Parish. He was born at Blencogo in Cumberland 12th March, 1738 and died 27th April, 1804. A faithfull steward of the Mysteries of God, he ever / maintained and enforced both by his writings and / discourses, that form of sound doctrine once delivered / unto the Saints, whilst in his opinion and practice / he exhibited a bright example of Christian charity / few men possessed a larger store of knowledgfe / or greater liberality of communication. His loyalty to his King remained unshaken even / when the madness of the people raged furiously / against him; and, for conscience sake, he resigned / ease and affluence in America, to endure / hardship and poverty in his native land / “But the Lord gave him twice as much as he had before: and blessed his latter end more than his beginning”. (Goblett Fecit, 1805)	723

Sacred to the Memory of JOHN BRATHWAITE ESQ., the course of whose whole life exhibited a singular and uniform pattern of universal benevolence for his only object was to do good. The rectitude of his mind corresponded with the purity of his hearth; correct in the conception of every religious and moral duty, he was steady in the practice of them. In every situation and under all circumstances he was invariably the same man, an affectionate relation, a sincere friend, a pious Christian, mild in judging, just and generous to all, moderate only in those gratifications which respected himself. The virtuous energies of his mind compre- hended all those humanities and sympathies of which our nature in its best state is susceptible. Born in the island of Barbadoes, he was warmly attached to that island, which he served in a public character, and which he loved as a father. He lived, beloved and respected, revered. He died the 21st of September, 1800, in the 78th year of his age, lamented by all who had the advantage and happiness of knowing him. Such was the man whose virtues this marble attempts thus imperfectly to record. It was erected by the directions of three nieces as a tribute to the memory of a most dear relation, whose living they loved and honoured, and whose death they will never cease to deplore, consoling themselves at the same time with the full assurance that he is removed to a blessed immortality where righteousness will have its reward. (Flaxman)	739
